Friday Evening, May 11, 1860.

The Administration and Douglas.

The good will of the administration towards Senator Douglas suffers no abatement. Willing as Douglas may be to conciliate, he meets no reciprocal feeling in Buchanan. Not one of the least obstacles in the way of the "Little Giant" to the presidential chair, is the bitter hostility of the federal officers, and not the least effective opposition will come from the government patronage and power, should the adjourned Charleston convention put him in nomination. The "Constitution," the administration organ at Washington, does not mince matters at all. It says:

"One thing, nevertheless, seems to be very decisively determined—namely, that the person whose pertinacious partizanship has caused all the difficulty at Charleston, cannot possibly be nominated for the Presidency as the candidate of a NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. We need not now go into the reasons for this conviction, which every clear headed man must possess, whether it is agreeable to his wishes or not."

This authoritative expounder of the purposes of the administration also indulges in the luxury of a little "plain talk" after this style:

"The idea that the great democratic party in this country, the party which has done in the past and has so many bright promises in the future—is to be sacrificed to the selfish ambition of one man, is to absurd and preposterous to be entertained for a moment."

"Let our friends everywhere be of good cheer, and with a hearty good will go to work to correct the errors and mistakes which have brought us to the very verge of ruin. Let selfishness be rebuked, and evil influences be made to hide their heads in shame and mortification. The time has come when some plain old fashioned talking will be done, and we propose to do it full part as time and occasion may require. We pause now only to get a fuller view of the whole field and prepare for the work before us."

Verily, there is a good time in prospect for the harmonious democracy. The southern democratic members of congress are reported to have requested the succeeding members of the Charleston convention to return and participate in the Baltimore convention, and if the request is complied with, the discord of the first assemblage will be intensified in the second meeting.—If they do not return, then a straight out southern candidate will be nominated at Richmond, and the cotton opens with enough candidates to give full employment to the most active disposition for a "nuisance" generally. With Bell to concentrate the opposition element of the south; a full-fledged fire-eater for the cotton states and extreme men of the south; a republican to sweep the free states, and the administration to throw its strength every where where it will tell the most against the Illinois aspirant, Douglas has, indeed, a delightful prospect before him, even if he escapes at Charleston. The situation of the Mississippi boatman whose craft had been wrecked, and who was discovered floating upon a solitary plank, singing—

"My life is in the hands of the Lord,
It ain't no wonder, 'Till I see the Lord."

aply represents the condition of "Little Doug."

The Cincinnati Platform.

When, four years ago, the Cincinnati platform was erected, it was regarded by its friends as a masterpiece of workmanship, but by its opponents as a consummate production of jesuitism and jugglery, capable of adaptation to any section of the Union; susceptible of a construction to suit the most diverse and conflicting doctrines, it ran its designed career of fraud and deception, and eventuated in the election of a candidate whose administration has disgraced the country, and whose sole adherents are the retainers secured by public plunder and robbery. But times have changed. What was policy four years ago, is boldness now; what was management or intrigue then, has become, in a later day, arrogance and defiance. The late that gave the gentle strain of squatter sovereignty has become the bugle that swells the blast of a slave code and congressional protection. The south, emboldened by its successful debauchery of the northern democracy, and haughty in its strength, demands a new structure, so framed that no one can dispute its nature or misinterpret its meaning. True, there is resistance; some of the old architects have a lingering fondness for the nondescript they fashioned, and which was used to such good purpose; but resistance is ruin: the new designers have discarded the old and demand a new work.

They will accept nothing uncertain, or with two sides facing with different aspect two hostile sections of the country. In the manner of this demand, moreover, they are as outspoken as they are imperious in the demand itself. Look at a little, but significant incident in the council of builders at Charleston:

"Mr. Benjamin spoke at some length, asserting that the Cincinnati platform properly construed, was sufficient. But under what circumstances was that platform offered at Charleston? It was with the understanding that it had two interpretations."

"Mr. Pugh denied this."

"Mr. Benjamin replied that it was admitted time and again in the convention. It was avowed that the Cincinnati platform was put into the hands of the south had a right to hold property in the territories, and the legislature had no right to affect that right; that not a single northern state could be carried. That was a fraud on the honor and faith of the democratic party. It was unworthy of democrats to go into the canvass on a platform wearing two aspects. It would enter into the contest on no such platform. Let their principles be blazoned in letters of light upon their banner, and upon them let them stand or fall."

The confusion at the power of Babel pales into obscurity under the blaze of a democratic national convention, and that shipwrecked pile is a not inappropriate emblem of the monument which will record the fate and the works of the hands of the men who are now attempting to thwart the will of a free people. Let the impending judgment be executed!

ONLY TWO OF US.

BY MRS. M. E. ROBINSON.

(Concluded.)

"Squire Crosby went back to the kitchen with a slow step. To his utter astonishment it was twelve o'clock, and he had quite forgotten dinner. The fire was entirely out, the room was in a sad plight, the list of duties not half completed, and the meat, vegetables, etc., remained untouched."

"His zeal had cooled amazingly since morning, and he had repented accepting his wife's proposition. He had expected to see her enter every moment, express herself satisfied with the arrangement, and desire him in a very humble manner to go back to the office and resume his legitimate sphere of action."

But Mrs. Crosby did not appear, and he was at length obliged to collect his energies for the purpose of making another fire.

After wearing out his patience, he succeeded in his undertaking, and consigned the meat to a cold oven.

"The Squire, however, was too late to think of a dinner. Mrs. Crosby must excuse him that time, although he had always expected it of her, under all circumstances. He began to think that it certainly did require some ingenuity and calculation to dispose of so many duties in a morning, and had some faint suspicion that housekeeping was not such a fine joke, after all. He wondered how Mrs. Crosby prospered, and whether she did not wish herself safe at home; busied herself in anticipating how frightened she would be at finding how much work had been laid out for the day, and how completely nonplussed she must inevitably appear, if a client should happen to call for advice."

"This last idea was such an amusing idea that our lawyer rubbed his hands and laughed to himself at the ridiculous figure which he fancied Mrs. Crosby was about that time making."

Leaving the Squire to work out the rest of the items, we will attend the footsteps of Mrs. Crosby to her husband's office, and note her experience there."

Tom Pettifogger, the lawyer's clerk, stared somewhat perseveringly when he saw Mrs. Squire Crosby enter the office with an assured step, and proceed to hang up her bonnet and shawl with a genuine business air.

"Tom," said Mrs. Crosby, snapping her fingers carelessly, "is this office in perfect order?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the infant barrister, more surprised.

"I beg leave to differ with you sir. Do you see these papers all scattered about here? Pick them all up, and file them in proper order."

"Where is the Squire?" asked Pettifogger, with mouth agape.

"In Squire's study, Tom, and you're my man of business. Mr. Crosby told me that you had a memorandum of to-day's work. Produce it, if there is such a thing."

Pettifogger fumbled about awhile among the papers, and succeeded in finding the document in question. With the faintest possible smile, he handed it to his employer, who scanned it with a cold eye.

"Items," said Mrs. Crosby, with a nod. "A writ of replevin for the distress of Simon Snooks. Fill out a quit-claim deed for John Skyles. Advise Captain Saunders about action for damages against Farmer Jones. A writ of attachment in case of Brown versus Smith. Examine letters respecting Miss Bright's breach of promise case. Send Higgins' bill. Write a threatening letter to Thompson. Terry Joe Banker, if possible. Respectfully invite Colonel Drummer to call and settle Major Greasy's bill. Take depositions in Wiggin's slander case. Get up an issue between Townsend and Ferris. Distress the widow Sanborn. Make out costs and damages in case of Folger & Polson. Examine the title to lands lying north of the Mistletoe river, claimed by Talbot & Tomkins. Kick Bill Buzzleton (firm of Buzzleton & Buggs) out of the office. Brownlaw Mrs. Chandler for her landlord Hogin. Tweak Johnson's nose. The above to be done, besides attending to incidental office business, as it may occur."

"Well, here's work!" thought our lady, her face considerably cooled by this formidable array of duties. "Tom, do you know much?" she asked, recovering her self-possession.

"Tom didn't seem to know whether he did or not—yawned twice—but expressed no opinion in words."

"I mean, are you any part of a lawyer?" resumed our fair barrister.

"I know all about the Squire's business, ma'am."

"Very good. You must co-operate with me to dispatch all the items here named with the least possible delay. I will test your knowledge of little, if you please. What is Buzzleton's?"

"A writ for delivering a person from false imprisonment, or from one court to another," said Tom, promptly.

"Very good. What about this Lewis case?"

"I made that out last evening, ma'am."

"You acted very properly. Next comes a writ of replevin."

"That's all ready—finished it just as you came in."

"I'm glad that you attend to your business, Tom. I'll speak a good word for you to my husband," continued our heroine, brightening up.

"Thank you, Mrs. Crosby."

"Two things are disposed of, then—false imprisonment and the writ of replevin. Do you know our pretty seamstress, Tom?"

Mr. Pettifogger colored to the very climax of his forehead, and said "yes" in a very sheepish manner.

"Help me, Tom, and I'll help you. Have you had a quarrel with that young lady lately?"

"Day before yesterday—and—and—I'm afraid she won't come right again. I'm never here. I'll warrant you in that quarrel—well, but—must get through with the list."

"I'll put you clear through it by—by—"

"Ah, Tom, don't swear!"

"Well, I don't know what that all means; but blast me—that ain't swearing, ma'am—if I do not my best for you in any way you name."

"Margaret is a fine girl—next comes a quit-claim deed. You have got blanks ready to fill up, doubtless?"

"Exactly."

"Dip quill pen and dash it off," added Mrs. Crosby.

Mrs. Crosby Pettifogger was filling up the deed for Skyles, in potted Capt. Saunders to take advice concerning an action for damages brought against him by James Jones.

"My husband is not in at this moment, Capt.," said Mrs. Crosby. "Please sit down and wait a little while."

Now, our heroine was a very pretty woman, and had exceedingly captivating manners, which were generally pleasing to the other sex. The Capt. was not at all averse to "waiting awhile" with much satisfaction. Please tell me something about this deed, if you please, for you know that I have studied law extensively myself?" continued the Squire's wife, with a pleasant smile.

Quarters was quite ready to relate his troubles to such a listener, and so straightway unbosomed himself. It appeared that his neighbor Jones' swine had trespassed upon his grounds, destroying, at certain times, quantity of corn and potatoes, and to indemnify himself, he had shot one of said quadrupeds, for which act the owner had brought an action.

"I can tell you what to do in this case precisely," replied the Squire himself," said Mrs. Crosby, smiling still more pleasantly. "What was the animal worth do you suppose?" she resumed.

"Just about six dollars, Mrs. Crosby."

"What do you imagine the whole affair will cost, if it goes to trial?"

"Twenty-five or thirty dollars."

"Then the cheapest way will be to—leave me ten dollars, and I'll settle the case, Captain," added the lady, with a smile that was really bewitching.

The Captain mused a moment, and then exclaimed: "I'll do it! Blow me if I don't believe you can settle it if anybody can!"

"The Captain left the money and departed. The moment he had gone, a note was despatched to Farmer Jones, requesting him to step up to the office. While Tom was engaged on the writ of Brown versus Smith, Jones made his appearance, and the swine affair was settled for seven dollars. The letters of Miss Bright were examined, and nothing like a promise of marriage could be made out of them. Mrs. Crosby immediately wrote to that young lady, advising her to drop the prosecution of the case, as there was no reasonable hope for her succeeding, if the letters were the only evidence in the premises. Higgins' bill was sent, and Tom wrote a threatening letter to Thompson; but how was she to "treaty Joe Banker"—the item next on the programme?

"Nothing easier," said Tom. "Write and tell him his case will come on in a few days; that will bring him right to a settlement."

Pettifogger was instructed to write a note to that effect, and also respectfully invite Col. Drummer to call and settle Major Greasy's bill. As the witness had not come to appear in the slander case, Wiggins vs. Buggs, the fair lawyer and the willing clerk passed on to the next item.

"To get up an issue between Townsend & Ferris. Don't that mean a quarrel, Tom?"

"Just that," said Tom.

"Well, then, let us prevent it by all means."

"We have only to let it stand as it is, then, for they are peaceable fellows that won't quarrel of themselves."

"Distress the Widow Sanborn, comes next. Is that right, Tom?"

"The Squire has ordered to lay an attachment on all her things," said Tom, by way of explanation.

"For what?"

"Because she can't pay some kind of a hunting bill brought against her by that swindler, Sampson."

"Can't this unjust action be quashed?"

"It ought to be, at any rate. It can be put off long enough to give the Widow warning of what is going on, so that, she can put her things out of his reach," replied Tom.

Pettifogger, you are a treasure! Just run over and give the Widow a slice of advice, and then I'll help you make out damages in the case of Folger & Polson."

It was thus that Mrs. Crosby went on, and by means of the able assistance of Tom, had rubbed the last three items, viz:—"Kick Bill Buzzleton (of the firm of Buzzleton & Buggs) out of the office; browlaw Mrs. Chandler, and tweak Johnson's nose."

"Now, as none of these persons are present, what can I do to?" inquired Mrs. Crosby, looking archly at Tom.

"Why, just as the Squire would—wait till they come in."

"Exactly; but it is now about the hour of dinner, and if people can't come in at proper business hours, how can they expect to be kicked down stairs, browlawed, or tweaked? So, my young friend, we will go to dinner. You will not be wanted this afternoon, therefore you need not return to the office, but amuse yourself in any way you please—by going to see Margaret, perhaps. Look the office and give me the key: I won't forget your services."

On her return, our gentle attorney met her seamstress, and having some work to consult her about, asked her home to dinner. As soon as she entered the house, she knocked at the door and said laconically:

"What a delicious spectacle met her vision. Mr. Crosby with a segment of a squash in one hand, and a potato in the other."

"I have brought a friend to dinner, Mrs. Crosby," added the lady.

"The deuce you have!" cried the Squire, elevating two notoriously smutty eyebrows, half in vexation, half in wonder at his wife's gravity.

"How soon will dinner be ready?" she continued, drawing forth her watch with the air of one in a hurry.

"Eight o'clock from present appearances, it will be on the table in about an hour and a half from this time," said the new housekeeper, opening the oven door to look at the meat, which was not yet blistered with the heat.

"As there only two of us, Mrs. Crosby, I cannot listen to any excuse for this unpardonable delay. For my part I can't see what you have found to employ yourself about!"

"Come, Mrs. Crosby, don't exult until your work has been inquired into. There is such a thing as crowing before it is out of the wood."

You refer to my office business, I am glad to be able to inform you that it is successfully accomplished, and I have half a day to spare," replied that lady, consulting her watch.

"The labors corpus—" began Mr. Crosby. "And the writ of replevin," interrupted Mrs. Crosby.

"And the Saunders case?" resumed the Squire.

"And the threatening letter?" chimed in the lady.

"The land case, and the breach of promise case?"

"All attended to, sir, as well as Buzzleton, of the firm of Buzzleton & Buggs."

"Hail! hail! no! no! you can't put that load on me, Mrs. Crosby! Where's Tom?"

"Locked the office and sent him off—didn't want him—he'll be back to-morrow."

"The deuce, Mrs. Crosby!"

"I said Tom, sir. And now have you attended to the cases which I left you?—Ahem! let's see. Are the dishes washed, cloths in order, shelves wiped down, knives cleaned, stove blacked, fire kept bright, hall swept, stairs rubbed, lamps trimmed, chamber work done?"

"Hold on, Mrs. Crosby, for heaven's sake! No woman alive could do all that in one forenoon!"

"Beg your pardon; before you is a woman who has done it every forenoon for years."

"For only two of us?"

"For only two of us, Mrs. Crosby."

"Are you a woman of veracity, Mrs. Crosby?" asked the Squire, with a smile.

No gentleman has yet presumed to call it in question," responded the lady, with a slight inclination of the body.

"Then I give it up, and make a graceful surrender of these premises."

"And only two of us?"

"Mrs. Crosby, I beg your pardon. I think that I am a little wiser than I was this morning. I assure you, upon the honor of a gentleman, that I will never speak disparagingly of a woman's duties again."

"Two of us, I find, make considerable work—enough, at least, for one little wife to perform!"

"You are pardoned on the spot. And let me assure you that I do not regret this day's experience; and perhaps the Widow Sanborn and several others will not."

And your humble servant, among the number," replied the Squire, bowing.

We have only to add that the Squire kept his word; that Tom Pettifogger married the pretty seamstress, and "only two of us" was never used except as a pleasant jest.

Telegraphic.

REPORTED FOR THE DAILY GAZETTE.

BY WISCONSIN STATE TELEGRAPH LINE.

Office in Union Passenger Depot.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10.

Hon. John Bell is at the Lapiro House in this city, and preparations are making for a grand serenade to him to-morrow night.

Mr. Connor was advertised to make a second balloon ascension yesterday, from Palace Garden, despite the violent gusts of wind which now and then sprang up, and the remonstrances of his friends, he persisted in attempting the ascension, but no sooner had the balloon left the ground than it was dashed with force against a concert saloon which faces the garden. The basket caught for a moment under the projecting eaves of the building and then was hurled against a skylight with great force.

The balloon instantly collapsed. Mr. Connor was found on the roof of the building, and the physicians who were immediately summoned, ascertained that his injuries were principally internal. During the evening he remained insensible and expired at 11 p. m.

His wife witnessed the casualty, and would probably have shared her husband's fate had the ascension power of the balloon been found sufficient to carry up two persons, as it was her intention to attempt a voyage.

BALTIMORE, May 11.

We have had a tremendous rain storm all night. The rain is still falling though it is somewhat abated. There is a great flood on the falls and the streets in the vicinity are overflowing. It is feared that serious damage has been done about the falls.

WASHINGTON, May 10.

Special correspondence of the Tribune.

Most serious and important developments were made before the Corode Committee to-day. Mr. Wendell was called to show how the 30,000 or 40,000 dollars, which he said had been expended in carrying the English Bill through the House, had been applied. His books were compared with those of the Bank of the Metropolis, which was represented by Mr. Smart, its book keeper. He proved that the money had been distributed through Mr. Bean of Ohio, clerk in Mr. Allen's office in the last Congress, and Alexander Hay of Penn., a gent of elegant leisure, well known in sporting circles, and Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Express, and secretary to the Union and Constitutional Committee, over which Mr. Crittenden presides. Mr. Hay received the largest sum for distribution, and the money was expended in carrying the bill through the House.

Mr. Wendell did not deny that 10,000 or 15,000 dollars had been authorized for a single vote, and admitted that these payments were made in expectation of being met through government patronage, by which he had previously profited. He was fortified to having had many conversations with the President during the progress of the English Bill in reference to that subject.

The Market.

New York, May 11.

Flour market opened rather easier, and closed barely steady, $5.40 to $5.50 extra state; $5.50 to $5.60 common to medium extra western. Canadian flour little more demanded. Rye flour unchanged. Wheat market in favor of buyer, with only very moderate demand, $1.28 to $1.30 club; $1.28 choice spring. Barley dull. Corn firm, 75. Pork firmer. Lard firm, 114 1/2. Butter in fair request.

John H. Lewis, our brilliant U. S. Marshal, has been tried at Milwaukee and acquitted of the charge of fraudulent voting. It was not denied that he voted out of his own ward, but it was claimed that it was not his intention to violate the law. He did not know what ward he lived in, and it is claimed it was not to be presumed that the office of marshal conferred upon him additional intelligence. We think that is so.

The Japanese embassy has arrived at Norfolk. The steamer Philadelphia leaves Washington to-day for Norfolk, and will bring up the Japanese, who will be allowed some days' rest before the government lavishes upon them the honors now in preparation.

A bill passed the house on the 10th, which repeals all laws in New Mexico establishing either peonage or African slavery, and also repeals a section prohibiting the courts from taking cognizance of any coercion that masters may give their servants.

The HONESTED BILL.—The amendment to the senate homestead bill, offered by Mr. Rice, extending the operation of the bill to lands not subject to private entry, was rejected by the senate yesterday. The bill was passed, ayes 44, noes 8. The noes were Messrs. Briggs, Clingman, Hamlin, Hunter, Mason, Pearce, Powell and Toombs.

TARIFF BILL.—Mr. Morrill's tariff bill passed the house, yesterday, by a vote of 105 to 64.

The territorial bills were up in the house yesterday, and there was an exciting time. A proposition was made by Mr. Kellogg, of Illinois, providing for the election of all territorial officers by the people of organized territories. The bill was postponed to Saturday.

There will be no religious services in the Methodist Episcopal Church on next Sabbath.

Vice President.—Edward Everett has been put in nomination for Vice President by the "Constitutional Union" Convention at Baltimore. Bell and Everett will be a highly respectable ticket for the "old gentlemen" of the country to support.

CONNECTICUT.—The Hon. Lafayette S. Foster was yesterday re-elected United States senator from Connecticut by a large majority. His competitor was Gen. W. W. Eaton, of Hartford, who, previous to his nomination by the democratic caucus, made a bitter anti-Douglas speech.

DEATH OF "PETER PARLEY."—Samuel Goodrich, better known as "Peter Parley," died in New York yesterday, in the 67th year of his age. He has been in feeble health for some time, and his decease was unexpected. Mr. Goodrich was born in Ridgefield, Connecticut, on the 13th of August, 1793.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

A colossal bust of Schiller is to be a permanent fixture in the New York central park.

Col. Richard Realf, the eccentric individual who was secretary of John Brown's provisional government, is preaching regularly every Sunday at Shaker Village, near Lebanon, Ohio, to his Shaker brethren.

A member of the Tennessee legislature, quite a young man, fell in love with a girl at Columbus, Ohio, who sold oranges about the capitol. She was beautiful and modest, and he was led to inquire into her condition, found her poor but respectable, and came back in two weeks and made her his wife.

Sensible Tennesseean—lucky orange girl. Mr. Phelps, of Missouri, (democrat,) has been nominated for re-election to congress. He has been a member since 1845; his present term completing sixteen years.

Dr. John Doy, whose persecution by the border ruffians in Kansas will be remembered, is now in Buffalo. Dr. Doy has published a narrative of the events in Kansas in which he participated from the first settlement of the territory—he having been one of its pioneers—through the entire struggle.

A RESPECTED DELEGATE.—An impostor at Charleston, who for two or more days had been admitted to share the good living of the delegation at St. Andrews' hall, upon the supposition that he was "one of 'em," was finally detected and committed to the workhouse in default of $50 bail.

One of the popular preachers in Boston, in order to make his people fully appreciate his eloquence, adopts the plan now and then, of inviting some clerical brother, especially noted for heaviness, to exchange with him.

It is said a suite of twenty noblemen and distinguished gentlemen, including two dukes and a major general, will accompany the Prince of Wales on his visit to Canada this spring. Won't there be a time among the lion hunters!

The Police Gazette says that in New York, shrewd detectives take it for granted that every woman who habitually wears a veil in public is engaged in picking pockets, or in an intrigue of some sort, and they watch her accordingly.

The Mormons, it is said, are turning their attention to the culture of cotton; and in Washington county, three hundred miles south of Salt Lake city, about five tons were raised the past year. One person raised two hundred pounds of ginned cotton on one-fourth of an acre. And it is stated that enterprising citizens are sending to the states for cotton gins to work up the cotton so as to bring it into market.

It is said that the Japanese thought the ladies whom they saw at the Sandwich Islands, wearing crinolines, actually filled the immense skirts. They roared on finding out the mistake. Mrs. and Miss Japan don't indulge in crinolines.

ANOTHER VICTIM.—A girl named McGorry, employed in the seminary at Le Roy, New York, died last Monday of injuries received from spilling burning fluid upon her clothing while carrying a lamp along a hall of the institution. So they go.

DEATH BY SUICIDE.—Saturday, Geo. Egert, aged 60, a farmer, of Trenton, Oneida county, New York, committed suicide by hanging. The jury found that Mr. Egert came to his death by hanging himself while laboring under temporary insanity.

MOUSTACHED.—Moustached church members are being objected to by ladies who go to the communion table. The immersion of a bundle of hair in the wine cup does not improve the palatability of the liquid.

FORNEY'S PRESS declares that if Douglas is slaughtered, at the second time of asking a nomination, his friends "will avenge his fall by such an appeal to the ballot boxes, as will be remembered for a century. The secessionists shall have Douglas or a republican. The hour for compromise has passed forever."

The republicans of Washington are preparing for an active canvass in the coming city election. They will put in nomination for mayor, Richard Wallach, Esq., formerly the marshal of the District under President Taylor. His friends claim that he was fairly elected mayor last year, but was cheated out of it by fraudulent votes and returns.

The Rev. Daniel Worth, the North Carolina martyr to freedom, has arrived in New York. After being tried twice, convicted of circulating four copies of Helper's Impending Crisis, and sentenced on each indictment to twelve months imprisonment, he has obtained bail in the sum of $3,000. He has come to the north to tell the story of his wrongs, describe the situation of the south at this crisis, and obtain material aid to effect his release. After being released on bail he had to be kept secluded, and was taken out of the state by stratagem.

The Pope, according to a letter dated Zurich, April 10, is going to leave the city of Rome and to put up his residence in the city of Ancona. His object in changing his residence is to get rid, at last, of the French garrison of the city of Rome, by taking away the only pretext of protecting the Head of the Catholic Church.

An amusing scene occurred at the railroad depot in Dayton, Ohio, one day last week. A brainless coxcomb in the crowd made himself quite merry at the expense of a seely looking old man, whose shoes were tied with too strings, and when remonstrated with for his rudeness and lack of good breeding only laughed the louder, saying the old fellow looked so "doomed funny."

At length some one informed him that the old man was none other than Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, and that he was rich enough to buy a ten acre field of such puppies as he had proved himself to be.

A FEARFUL STORM OF ICE.—The Kansas papers come to us with long accounts of a fearful hail or ice storm which took place in the town of Leroy recently. Windows were demolished, clapboards torn off, live stock killed, and the balls of ice, in some instances, passing entirely through the roofs of houses. A correspondent of the Nacah Valley Register says that he picked up a number of chunks of ice weighing over a pound.

MANURING FRUIT TREES AND SMALL FRUITS.—Do not apply stimulating manure like guano, to fruit trees during spring or summer. If at any time, choose the fall or early winter when guano may be used by those who desire it, and before the young sprouts start in the spring the guano will not injure the young roots, as it surely will in early spring or summer. Fruit trees do not require either burnt manures or guano, but a full supply of inorganic food. Old mortar is an excellent fertilizer for apples with occasional slight doses of wood ashes in summer and phosphates in early spring. The lime and salt mixture, when properly made so as to contain no free alkali, may occasionally be given with profit. Each of the above may be applied in two, but not at the same time; if top-dressed, they will find their way into the soil by dews and rains, and as they are volatile, no loss can occur from such practice.

Peach, plum, apricot, and nectarine, are benefited by decomposed swamp muck, wood-earth, river-mud, &c., with slight quantities of phosphates and potash. These fertilizers in spring and wood ashes in summer and phosphates in early spring.
